Objective

This document is an advising tool written by a Berkeley Study Abroad advisor to review program specific details that may impact a student’s decision to apply for an UCEAP program. The document is not a summary of eligibility requirements, academic, housing, application and other logistical details freely available to students on the UCEAP and BSA website. The best source of detailed program information are the UCEAP webpages for China. If any concerns you have are not addressed on the UCEAP website or this Advising Notes document, please contact the BSA Advisor for this program.

What UCEAP Alumni Say About Studying Abroad in China

A UC Berkeley student at Fudan University in Fall 2013 blogged about her experience in China! Check it out here.

Newer UCEAP China programs

The Summer Global Internship, Shanghai program was offered for the first time in Summer 2019. This program allows students to intern in one of a variety of fields in China. The UCEAP Global Summer Internship program is different than Berkeley Global Internships, although the programs are very similar. Please note that Berkeley Global Internships does not offer a program in China. If you are unsure about which program to apply to, reach out to the UCEAP adviser for select Summer Global Internship programs or the Global Internships coordinator. Contact information is available in our virtual advising guide.

Applicants to Asia locations can expect traditional business hours for internships, which can run upwards of 45 hours/week. In addition to the internship, students will be taking one course hybrid online/in-person course, Academic Internship in the Global Workplace.
It is recommended that students applying for this program have at least 3 areas of interest with regards to their internship placement. You may read more about the placement process on CIEE’s website. Common industry sectors for internships include, but are not limited to:

Business
Finance
Communications
Computer Science
Education
Entrepreneurship, Innovation, Startups
Hospitality & Tourism
NGOs/NPOs
Media (no Film or TV)

Some challenging internship fields to place in Shanghai are:

Health Sciences, Healthcare, Public Health
Law
Politics & Government
Psychology

Please note that CIEE (which sponsors the Summer Global Internship, Shanghai program) has an "exclusivity agreement" with UCEAP. This means that UC students must participate via UCEAP on any CIEE programs that are offered through UCEAP; they are not allowed to participate in such programs directly via CIEE. If CIEE offers program options other than the UCEAP program in a particular city or country, then UC students may participate in those options independently of UCEAP and apply directly to CIEE. Students who choose to study abroad independently are advised to read our Independent Study Abroad Guide for important details before applying.

Citizenship and Passport Considerations

For all UCEAP China programs, students cannot be accepted to a Chinese university without a valid passport at the time of application to the program. Your UCEAP application will state how long your passport must be valid after the end date of the program. U.S. permanent residence and a green card are not sufficient documentation for admittance to a Chinese university, and they do not substitute for a passport. Stateless or refugee citizens cannot apply to UCEAP China programs. If you do not have a passport or need a renewal, please review the Passport Information section of the COVID-19 Information for Berkeley Study Abroad Students page, and take action immediately.

Students who are in the process of applying for U.S. citizenship or making any legal name changes are not eligible to apply unless the changes will be completed before application to the UCEAP program. There are no exceptions to this.

Tsinghua University will not accept students who only have a PRC, Hong Kong, Macau or Taiwan citizenship. There are no exceptions to this.
Peking University will not accept students who have only PRC, Hong Kong, Macau or Taiwan citizenship. There are no exceptions to this. This applies to the Chinese in Beijing and Peking University programs.

Fudan University accepts students with PRC, Hong Kong, Macau and Taiwan citizenship; however, those students cannot stay in university dormitories and should be prepared to live off-campus. Assistance with these arrangements will be provided. Students with Hong Kong, Macau, or Taiwan passports must obtain “home visit permits” to enter China and do not need to apply for a visa. This applies to the Fudan University and Shanghai Summer programs.

Please note that China does not recognize dual citizenship. A Chinese citizen who gains citizenship of another country automatically loses Chinese citizenship under Chinese law (Nationality Law of the People's Republic of China, Article 9). If you are a dual citizen of the United States and China, the Chinese government will usually not permit the U.S. Embassy to provide consular assistance to you unless you entered China on a U.S. passport with a valid Chinese visa. Regardless of your travel documents, if you are a dual citizen, or otherwise have ethnic or historical ties to China, it is possible that Chinese authorities will assert that you are a Chinese citizen and deny your access to U.S. consular representatives if you are detained.

If you are a naturalized U.S. citizen or have a possible claim to Chinese citizenship and are traveling to China, inform yourself about Chinese law and practices relating to determination and loss of Chinese citizenship. Chinese authorities generally consider a child born in China to at least one Chinese parent to be a Chinese citizen, even if the child was issued a U.S. passport at the time of birth.

Preparing for your program in China

It is highly recommended that all students intending to study abroad in China complete a course at Berkeley related to Chinese culture or history prior to departure.

Scholarship Opportunities

Host university and government scholarships have been offered in recent terms for programs hosted by Fudan University, Peking University, and Tsinghua University. Information about these scholarships is typically shared on your UCEAP Pre-Departure Checklist, after program nomination.
Program Considerations – Summer

Chinese in Beijing
Students must take 2 courses worth 5 semester units each, for total of 10 semester units. There is no option to reduce the number of units a course is worth. Courses must be taken for a letter grade. This program offers beginning to advanced Chinese language coursework, and students may earn up to one year of language study. This program does not have coursework for native or heritage speakers. This program is hosted by Peking University.

Students live with UC and international students in a foreign student dorm next to the Peking University campus; students may apply for a homestay with a local Chinese family with approval from the UC Study Center.

Shanghai Summer
Students can take content courses related to Chinese history, culture, politics, business, economics, international and intercultural studies, and Chinese language. Three courses are possible only if you take a Chinese language course (two content courses + one Chinese language course). To be eligible for summer financial aid, students must enroll in three courses worth 2.7 semester units each.

Program Considerations – Semester & Year

Tsinghua University
This program primarily offers coursework taught in English in the fields of Engineering, Economics, and Business. This program is hosted by Fudan University. Additionally, students will have access to Chinese language instruction. Students with advanced Chinese skills may also be able to enroll in regular university coursework in Chinese after arrival (permission of the instructor is required for enrollment).

Students live with UC or international students in a single or shared room on campus in a foreign student dorm; students may live off-campus with UC Study Center approval.

Students with U.S. citizenship may be nominated for the Credit Student Scholarship for China-US Humanities Exchange at Tsinghua University. Students can receive up to 2500 RMB per month. Awardees will need to open a local account at Chinese bank after they arrive and the money will be transferred to their account directly.
Fudan University
This program offers coursework taught in English, and the curriculum is taught entirely by Fudan faculty. This program offers a majority of courses in Business, Economics, Journalism, Communications, and Media & Communications. Students are highly encouraged to enroll in a Chinese language class, but it is not mandatory to do so. Students with advanced Chinese skills may also be able to enroll in regular university coursework in Chinese after arrival (permission of the instructor is required for enrollment).

Confirmed course information is announced very close to departure for the program (mid- to late July for the Fall program and mid-January for the Spring program). Students will conduct academic planning with their major advisors based on the prior year’s course offerings during the semester prior to departure for the program, but they need to be prepared to communicate via email with their advisors and reconfirm their course choices (and the implication on making progress toward their major) once coursework is announced.

All courses are subject to a strict grading curve. University policy mandates that only 30% of students in a course can receive an A or A-, regardless of class size. Historically the grades for Berkeley students have been very good, but inevitably there are students who receive a B or B+ who feel their actual performance warranted a better grade. Grades are not negotiable, so students will need to work hard for their A’s given the competition with the curve.

Peking University
Because this program has limited coursework taught in English, it tends to be a better fit for students who have a strong background in Chinese (3 or more years of university-level Chinese). A successful UCEAP applicant to the Year-long Peking University program will be serious about their studies, have a strong language background, and have personal attributes that will enable them to thrive in a bureaucratic institution with little hand-holding.

The list of courses available in English will not be available until arrival in China, and offerings vary from year-to-year. In prior terms, the courses in English have focused on Chinese society & culture, politics, economics, or international relations. Courses taught in English in the area of Chinese Studies will be offered through the On China Series at Peking University.

Applicants without a strong background in Chinese are unlikely to have access to courses outside of Chinese language instruction and the On China Series. This is because students without sufficient language background will find it difficult to follow lectures and complete assignments in Chinese. Students who wish to take regular university courses (all of which are taught in Chinese) must pass a language test administered upon arrival.

Students live with UC and international students in a foreign student dorm next to the Peking University campus; students may apply to live off-campus approval from the UC Study Center.
Chinese in Beijing
The Fall Chinese in Beijing program focuses on language and culture courses only. This program is hosted by Peking University. Beginning to advanced Chinese language study is available with limited coursework taught in English (via the On China Series). Coursework taught in Chinese is not an option.

Students live with UC and international students in a foreign student dorm next to the Peking University campus; students may apply to live off-campus approval from the UC Study Center.

Calendar Considerations

For all UCEAP China programs, do not make plans to be out of the country between the end of the semester at Berkeley and the start of your UCEAP program in China. Students will not be able to apply for a visa without an official acceptance letter from the host university in China; these are not issued until 3 to 5 weeks prior to departure for UCEAP. You will not be able to enter China without a visa. Contact the BSA Adviser for China if you have already made plans to be outside of the country after the end of your term at Berkeley and the beginning of your term in China to see if the visa processing timeline will be possible for you.

The spring semester in China (for students on Year or Spring programs) ends in late-June to early-July depending on the program. Students are not permitted to depart China earlier than the date listed on the UCEAP program calendar. Fudan University has historically been unable to confirm program arrival and departure dates for the Fall program until late May or early June. Confirmed program dates for the Spring Fudan University program are typically announced in late November or early December. Students should not purchase a plane ticket until program dates are confirmed, which means students on these programs buy their plane ticket relatively close to departure. Students who buy plane tickets before program dates are confirmed run the risk of having to pay costly airline change fees if they guess incorrectly on the arrival dates. Students cannot arrive after the official UCEAP arrival date for an UCEAP program.

Internships

Internships are possible for students on semester or year-long program options in Beijing and Shanghai. The UCEAP Study Centers in Beijing and Shanghai maintain lists of internships held by prior program participants and you will find this information on the Internship tab of the UCEAP program pages. All internships are unpaid (due to visa restrictions) and are arranged after arrival. Students on the Shanghai Summer program should not anticipate having enough time to pursue an internship.
Letters of Recommendation

Letters of Recommendation are not required at the time of application for UCEAP China programs. However, two letters of recommendation are required after nomination to programs hosted by Peking University during the school year. This applies to the Fall Chinese in Beijing and the Spring & Year Peking University programs. The letters are sometimes requested with little turnaround time, so it may be easier to make arrangements for your letters of recommendation in advance of when you will be asked for them. Letters must be from UC Berkeley faculty or GSIs and printed on official UC letterhead. The letter can be addressed to the host university (ex. Dear Peking University Admissions Committee) and enclosed in a signed and sealed envelope. Further instructions about this letter will be provided on the UCEAP Pre-Departure Checklist after nomination.

Mental Healthcare in China

The prevalence of mental illness is rising in China, but treatment facilities remain underdeveloped. China’s mental health care trails behind many countries around the world. There is lack of trained mental health professionals, low investment in mental health, high stigma among the population, and lack of an effective public mental health systems of care. Official policy does not permit primary health care professionals to independently diagnose and treat mental disorders within the primary care system. There is a reluctance to address mental illness and psychiatry due to the limited extent to which health care professionals and public health officials are involved with the issue. The country's public health system is struggling to keep up with the demand in mental health care. In most regions of China, few good options exist even for local families that try to find professional help. China’s mental health hospitals are too few and grossly understaffed. Students with pre-existing conditions will need a treatment plan in place indicating when and to whom they will be reaching out for help. Please discuss a treatment plan with your mental health provider if you will need to seek mental healthcare while abroad.

Air Quality

While many students have reported that the pollution in Beijing and Shanghai are is not as bad as is often reported, air quality is often poor. The UCEAP Study Center monitors the air quality regularly and provides resources and information for students in country, but students with respiratory issues (such as asthma) may want to discuss with a health care provider how to prepare for time abroad in either city. If you wear contact lenses, you may need to take the prescription and a pair of glasses with you in case the heat or the city environment makes contacts uncomfortable.
Considerations for LGBTIQA+ Students

China is included on UCEAP’s list of destinations where extra caution is advised for LGBTIQA+ students. This list includes locations where (1) the rights of LGBTIQA+ persons are less definitive or (2) there are restrictions on the freedom of expression and association of LGBTIQA+ individuals. As in many countries, tolerance levels vary by region; major cities may be more accepting of the LGBTIQA+ community than rural areas. You can review the Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 2019 from the U.S. Department of State for more information.

Urban Chinese tend to be accepting of homosexuality, but in deeply conservative rural areas, homosexuality is neither discussed nor socially accepted. The result is a complex risk environment that has few clear social guidelines but little overt threat of violence or abuse.

According to the United Nations Development Program UNDP report, discrimination against LGBTIQA+ people is still rampant in China, where many people hold negative attitudes toward diversity of sexual orientation, particularly in schools and workplaces. Discrimination against openly gay people in Chinese workplaces is common, and there are no laws protecting LGBTIQA+ individuals.

In 2001, China removed homosexuality and bisexuality from the list of mental disorders, and in 2012 changed its blood donation policy from banning homosexual donors to only "men who have sex with men" in line with international practice. Socially, homosexuality is seldom discussed. Large generational, educational, and societal gaps persist, with older generations tending to be less accepting toward same-sex relationships.

Considerations for Students with Disabilities

Chinese universities typically do not provide academic accommodations for students who have disabilities.

Students with disabilities will find accessibility and accommodation very different from what they find in the United States. Standards adopted for making roads and buildings accessible to persons with disabilities are subject to the Law on the Handicapped, which calls for their "gradual" implementation; however, compliance with the law is lax. Even in newer areas of large cities, sidewalks often do not have curb cuts, making wheelchair or stroller use difficult. Many large streets can be crossed only via overhead pedestrian bridges not accessible except by staircase. Although some sidewalks have special raised “buttons” or strips to help those who are blind or have restricted sight to follow the pavement, they are unreliable. While most public buildings have elevators, they are often locked, and a responsible official with the key must be located before they can be used. In major cities, public restrooms in places visited by tourists usually have a least one handicap-accessible toilet. International signage is used to identify handicap-accessible facilities. Free or reduced-entry fares on public transportation are sometimes provided for a handicapped person and a companion, although this is usually stated only in Chinese and is often restricted to residents with special identification cards.
Considerations for Graduating Seniors

If you are a graduating senior who is applying to a year or spring semester program, please be advised that the finals period may stretch into June or July. Returning to Berkeley to walk in a commencement ceremony is an unrealistic expectation for year and spring participants. If walking in graduation is very important to you, we recommend that you apply to the National University Singapore, as there is a better chance that program will end before commencement. As an alternative to walking in a Spring ceremony, there is also a UC Berkeley "December Graduates Convocation" if you would like to have the experience of walking in graduation (not department-specific). Similarly, you can wait and walk in the following Spring departmental ceremony.

Graduating seniors participating on a spring semesters program should ensure that they are on the Spring degree list. If you are not yet on this degree list, you should contact your UC Berkeley College Adviser to petition to moving your expected graduation term. However, spring program grades are often not reported to UCEAP until mid-August, so your grades will not arrive in time for your degree to be processed with the spring degree list (which occurs in mid-July). You will be automatically removed from the spring degree list and placed onto the summer degree list, which is processed in October. Thus, your diploma would display a summer graduation date rather than a spring graduation date. This policy is subject to change. For all students, after your UCEAP grades arrive and you are waiting for the next degree list to be processed, you can request a "Certificate of Completion" from the Berkeley Registrar that can serve as "proof" of graduation.
